Your gold; ay, but your influence, your care, your counsels, where have these talents lain buried? You have helped to raise Bschools, but the children whom Providence has placed especially under your charge remain in ignorance of all but evil. You patronize hospitals, while your own workmen plunge nightly into those excesses which make them fit objects for these hospitals. You fear even to know what passes amongst those who daily spend their strength in your service. You seek not to penetrate the gloomy mysteries which might destroy your ease, and possibly break your rest. Vice stalks triumphant; misery follows close upon it-its dark, inseparable shadow; but you shut your eyes, for you wish not to see. Goldie. To oppose the mass of evil which is unhappily to be found in most manufacturing districts is the work of the clergyman, the missionary, but not mine. Philias. It is the work of every man--of every Christian to whom is given the power of opposing that evil. What! when fire is bursting forth from the crowded dwellings of a city, and the red, roaring flames are casting a lurid glare on the canopy of smoke curling and rolling above them, when a hundred voices shriek aloud for aid, would you fold your arms and look on, because you belong not to the firebrigade? When a leak is sprung in a vessel, and the hull sinks lower and lower, and all the efforts of the seamen at the...
