M. Schottenbauer, Ph D., United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 274 x 211 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book consists of a collection of short stories and poems from the author s childhood and teen years, as well as more recent artwork. Short stories include two variations on The Legend of Peter Borka, the title of a separate novel by the same author. These two short stories include similar ideas as the full-length novel, with variations. One is written as a piece of fictitious investigative journalism, and the other is written in a more contemporary style. Poems include They, a reflection on worldwide conflict such as that found in the Middle East. This poem embodies a linguistic perspective on the relationship between psychology and interpersonal relationships. A second poem, The Greatest Spy, written in 1988, was inspired by then Vice-President George Bush, former CIA Director who was elected President of the United States later that year. Artwork includes a variety of architecture, still-lives, and sketches of produce and product displays, all dedicated to the artist s father, who worked for the Defense Commissary Agency and taught the author how to draw house plans and build houses as a child and youth, in-between home lectures on economics and assorted military topics.
